MEET YOUR HOST!

Magda Kaczmarska

Magda Kaczmarska is a dancer, researcher and creative aging teaching artist based in New York City. Magda received her MFA in Dance Performance & Choreography and her BS in Biochemistry & Molecular Biophysics from the University of Arizona. Magda has dedicated her career to utilizing the vehicle of dance and movement to amplify and support creative community. She believes all of us possess the ability to harness our creative expression to support building meaningful and healthy communities around us. As an Atlantic Fellow for Equity in Brain Health at the Global Brain Health Institute, Magda builds collaborations around the globe to design and expand access to creative aging programs that support brain health across the lifespan.

In 2019, Magda founded DanceStream Projects to forward a mission to spark brain health and build creative community through dance and movement. She created Stories in the Moment, a co-creative dance, movement and storytelling program, in ally-ship with communities of people living with dementia to amplify their creative voice. Dance is a universal language. Through Stories in the Moment we use dance, movement and gesture to tell stories with our bodies. As we connect together, we expand our tools of "listening", "speaking" and "seeing". Together, we create stories in the moment that reflect the voices of our community!
